

Lusty Lady

It's hard to look at Lori Michaels, the self-billed Dyke Diva, and not think of T and A. But there's way more than meets the eye: She not only headlines the extraordinarily hot Me & the Girls dance and singing group, but is also the founder and president of Reach Out, Inc.

Michaels started the nonprofit when she was only in high school, having met with great success when she organized a one-time entertainment event geared toward bringing students and community closer. Now, almost 20 years later, the organization has grown into a far-reaching entertainment venue that delivers motivational speaking engagements, customized prevention programs, and health and fitness presentations to thousands of students along the East Coast. She and the other Reach Out performers work on a volunteer basis.

"I have performed out against drugs, crime, violence, prejudice, and I am so freakin' happy to do what I love, love what I do, and do what I can to make things better out there," the former pre-law student says.

When Michaels hits the stage with her dancers in her adults-only Me & the Girls review, you won't want to miss the show. In women's events from Key West to P-town and numerous Pride Fests in between, this diva and her stunning dancers have brought new meaning to high-energy, exotic, erotic and professional lesbian entertainment, singing and dancing in an explosion of driving music and sensual fluid motions. Whether she's onstage with one or four other dancers, Michaels and her girls will grab your attention and hold you right at the edge of your seat until the very last beat.
